How to Pot & Label Plants for the Sale

1) Label plastic tag as illustrated below

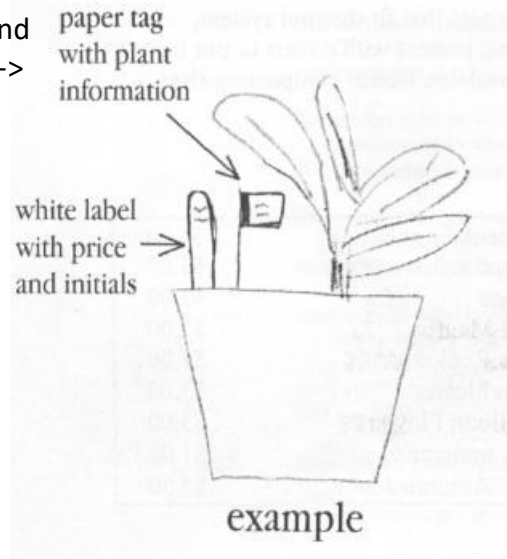

2) Fill out label tag with plant name and

3) Place the label tag and price tag in the pot →

Plants should be dug at least ten days before the sale and potted in pots that fit the root system, watered well and kept moist but saturated. If frost threatens, protect with covers or put in garage. Do not expose to full sun for a few days. Compost, available free at composting sites, makes a good temporary potting soil.

Suggested Methods for Pricing Garden Club Sale Items

Named varieties of specialty plants such as Peonies, Hostas, Irises, and Daylilies can usually be found in catalogs and priced at about half the commercial rate. Common or unnamed varieties would probably bring about $3.00 and named varieties somewhat higher to much higher. Divisions should be 3 to 5 eyes for peonies (hopefully divided last fall); double or triple growths of others; at least triple for Siberian Irises. Larger sizes are not especially desirable.

Fast spreading and/or invasive plants (many of which are wonderful, just need to be watched) will need to be priced fairly low but depend on pot size. Very small pots would bring $2, while medium pots would bring about $3 and large pots as much as $4. This would apply to most ground covers well established in their pots, as well as Monarda, Yellow Loosestrife, Gooseneck Loosestrife (we must not sell purple loosestrife!), Obedient Plant, Silver King Artemisia, etc. Please no invasive plants. Named, improved varieties could bring $1 more.

Clump forming perennials that divide readily into many plants such as Phlox, Asters, Chrysanthemums, Astilbe, Campanulas, if named, should bring higher prices than those by color. Many of these plants can be divided into very small pieces, but small named ones should still bring at least $3.00, unnamed, identified by color should be priced at $3.00 - $5.50. Run-of-the-garden or seedling plants $1.50 to $3.00. Larger plants should bring more.

Seed grown perennials, except garden volunteers, even if very small, should be priced at $2.00 with increases up to $5.50 each for larger plants. Some varieties come in packets of very few seeds, or at very high prices. These would call for higher prices than packets containing many seeds sold at moderate prices.

Plants not offered commercially such as woodland wildflowers (garden propagated, of course) that increase slowly could certainly start at $3.50 small, $4 medium or $5.50 large and go much higher depending on size and rarity.
